

|  |            |
|--|------------|
| Foreword Knut Olav Åmås and Øyvind Bruland  | 2   |
| Cancer: a public health issue Knut Olav Åmås  | 6   |
| He looks back at me and death has lost Thorvald Steen   | 24  |
| Taking the pulse of cancer Anne Lise Ryel   | 36  |
| Now I know there is such a thing as death Sarah Beate Sandnes in conversation with Lena Fauske  | 58  |
| Coping and attitudes Einar Øverengen  | 72  |
| Facts about cancer Frøydis Langmark   | 94  |
| Living life in the moment Harald Lystad in conversation with Lena Fauske                        | 110 |
| Cancer: causes and treatment Øyvind S. Bruland  | 122 |
| Life after cancer treatment Sophie Dorothea Fosså   | 145 |
| Moms never get sick Elisabeth Stang in conversation with Gøril Wiker                            | 160 |
| Challenges facing cancer research today Anne-Lise Børresen-Dale                                 | 172 |
| Thirteen wigs and a book of mementos Bente and Åge Ringdal in conversation with Gøril Wiker     | 184 |
| Aristocratic, yet egalitarian: reflections on the history of the Radium Hospital Finn Skårderud | 200 |
| Art, love, cake and cancer Svein Dahl in conversation with Gøril Wiker                          | 234 |
| The Norwegian Radium Hospital: more than a hospital Bente Riise                                 | 248 |
| Author biografies   | 276 |